THE PROBLEM OF FORMING INFORMATION-LEARNING ENVIRONMENT OF THE UNIVERSITY

V. Chagovets

The problems in the formation of information-educational environment of the university are analysed. Principles, arising up at development of information-educational environment and its components are specified for the intensification of educational process. Its successful operating conditions are effectived. Scientifically grounded construction of information-educational environments, selection, development of educational materials, optimum placing and integration of them on local (department, university (faculty), educational establishment) and regional or global levels can provide of efficiency computer-oriented educational systems, substantially disburden the internal and external means of communication and result in considerable financial and intellectual cost effectiveness.

Keywords: informative-teaching environment, technologies, teaching, intensification, educational process.